Erin	We're allowing women to die. It's ridiculous.
Ginny	How could we, in this day of science and awareness?
Nelson	I never knew that. That's actually, insane.
Kenye	It makes me feel a little angry.
Jennifer	It's horrific. It's mind-boggling.
Rachel	It makes me scared for the future of – you know, when I have kids or when other people my age start to have children.
Amani	You hear these numbers in countries outside of our own. You wouldn't think that they're happening at home.
Lisa	It's possible that she has other children. So she's not just losing that child; she's a loss to a whole family that depends on her, and a community and whatever else her ties are.
Charles	To think about kids, you know, having to grow up without moms] [That's just devastating to me.
Joe	That is a statistic that needs to be announced more loudly, because it is shocking.
Nelson	I guess a little ashamed of] [the fact that it's not a bigger – there's not a bigger outcry for support.
Kristina	It make me nervous, makes me sad. I mean, it makes me wonder why it's happening when it can be prevented.

Norma	Having a child shouldn't mean risking your life.
Connie	I can't even fathom how that's possible. And I don't know what the causes are.
Patrice	I'd be curious to know, sort of, why that rate is so high, and what we can do to bring it back down.
Zoe	I think many women, whether they're mothers or not, would want to learn more about how to prevent that.
Giovanna	I would love to know why and what we could do about it.
